

THE SCIENCE OF HERSELF

Widely respected in the so-called “mainstream” for her New York Times bestselling novels, Karen Joy Fowler is also a formidable, often controversial, and always exuberant presence in Science Fiction. Here she debuts a provocative new story written especially for this series. Set in the days of Darwin, “The Science of Herself” is a marvelous hybrid of SF and historical fiction: the almost-true story of England’s first female paleontologist who took on the...

Reader's Opinions

Various short stories/essays. I'd read the one before about the sadistic school for troubled girls. The one about Mary Harding made me appreciate her google doodle all the more (it reminded me of the stories of overlooked female scientists on DeGrasse Tyson's Cosmos show). A quiet story about a boy who is being raised by a single mother,...

Four stars for The Science of Herself. Three and a half for her other short stories. But might be biased given my love for Austen.
