

I DWELL IN POSSIBILITY: HOW WOMEN SHAPED A NATION

"I Dwell in Possibility" sweeps across three centuries of history to present a vivid gallery of women who in ways great and small shaped America's character and ideals from the country's beginnings to the early 1900s. In this wide-ranging panorama showcasing 160 paintings, photographs, and artifacts, author Donna Lucey tells a fascinating tale of women who made the nation what it is today: Puritan Anne Bradstreet, the New World's first published poet...Indian princess Pocahontas, the most mythologized early Native American...Sybil Ludington, the female Paul Revere...Civil...

Reader's Opinions

From Pocahontas, kidnaped in 1613, to women's suffrage in 1920, this is an interesting history of the United States entirely from women's perspectives. It deals with, among other things, childbirth, religion and preaching, industry, revolution, slavery, education, wealth and poverty, and the struggles against child labor and for women's...
